

In the editorial section, Sulaiman Bah (134) discusses the possibility of dropping door-to-door enumeration in the next South African census. Priya Agrawal (135) points to persistent challenges in further reductions of maternal deaths in the United States of America.

Gary Humphreys (138–139) reports on the introduction of digital bidding to medicine procurement processes in African countries. Fiona Fleck interviews Eric Goosby (140–141), the United Nations Secretary General's Special Envoy on Tuberculosis, about efforts to deliver more effective services.

How long did you wait to see the doctor?

Willemijn LA Schäfer et al. (161–168) assess patient satisfaction with primary care services in 34 countries.

Seeking informed consent

Nguyen Thanh Tam et al. (186–198) analyse thirty years' of evidence on informed consent in clinical trials.

Bringing the data to bear

Rosemary Wyber et al. (203–208) describe potential health-sector use of large quantities of data generated for other purposes.